

National Housing Authority

Conclusion

The surveys have provided baseline information on

- configuration and construction of houses and demography
- lighting and daylighting situation
- thermal environment and thermal comfort and includes ventilation
- appliances, usage patterns, energy use and carbon emission
- embedded carbon in buildings.

The next phase is to identify and quantify criteria and method for rating interior environmental quality, energy use, and carbon emission of houses.